

Interview Questions and Responses:

How do you break up your long term goals and tasks?

My sister said she usually just does tasks in order of deadlines and heads into them kind of barehanded, doing it as she goes.

Do you follow a to-do list for a task you set for yourself?

My sister said that she has a day to day schedule which she does follow, although sometimes not too strictly as other things show up. But she does follow a routine schedule with things to do as the best she can.

How would you feel about AI planning your goals and creating a to do list?

My sister said it would be pretty cool and helpful for specific types of goals but creepy because it would feel like her life is being controlled by an AI. She said that goals to complete are also more fun when you are figuring out how to do everything yourself, rather than having a pre planned list telling you what to do at each step.

Do you break your goals up by sections and different areas of your life?

My sister said she does like having her goals and schedule organized by specific tasks and genres so her goals are more organized. But she doesn't necessarily break them up, and mostly keeps her goals themselves pretty short and near sighted.

Expected App Functionality:

Users start the app to come across a dashboard of groups / areas that they want to create goals under.

User can create a group for what goals they want to set under a specific group(School, Sports, Career, etc). Group name shows up on the group dashboard for users to click and navigate into.

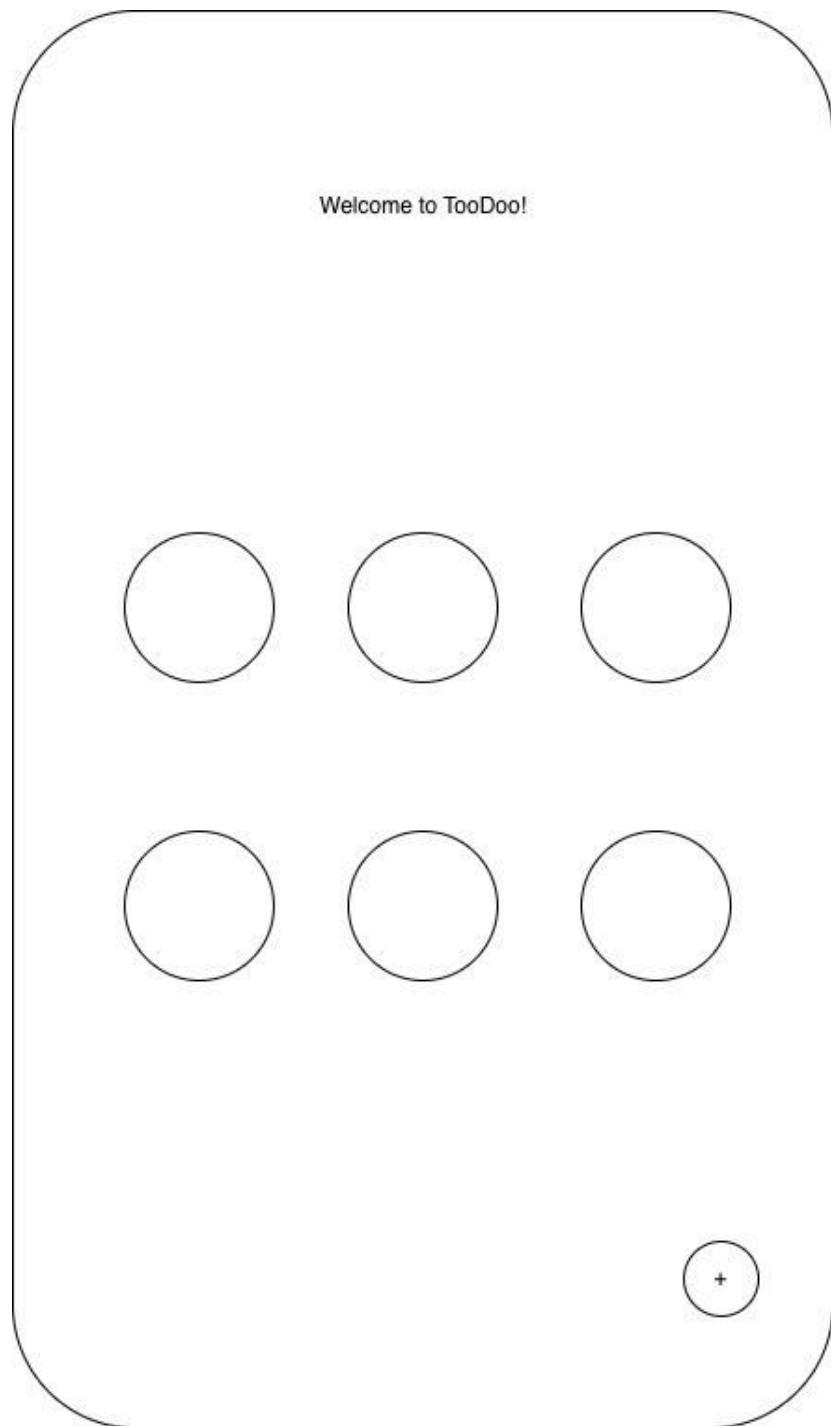

For each group, a user has a dashboard of goals. When they click the goal, it takes them to a to-do list description for that specific goal. These tasks are generated by AI or can be edited and created by the user.

The user creates a goal with goal name, priority, and description. Frame pops up asking the user information for that goal.

After the user hits submit the goal appears on the users dashboard, displaying goal name and priority.

User can delete and edit the goal by pressing the menu button the card and pressing delete or edit bringing them to the edit screen if edit is chosen.
